Meir Amor (PhD, Sociology, University of Toronto) is an Associate Professor of Sociology at Concordia University. Professor Amor researches and teaches about the interdependencies and interconnectedness of status equalization, the politics of inclusion and exclusion and violence in a historical and a comparative framework of analysis. His publications include: "Assimilation and Antisemitism ("the Glory and the Tragedy"): Comparing 15th Century Catholic Spain and Second Reich Germany," in Society, History and the Global Condition of Humanity: Essays in Honour of Prof. Irving M. Zeitlin, eds. Zaheer Baber and Joseph Braynt (Lanham, MD: Lexington Books, 2010), "Modernity, Citizenship and Racialization: Jim Crowism and Lynching Campaigns in the Post-Emancipation Southern United States" (2009), "Hérouxville and Québec's Democratic Confidence" (2007), "Violent Ethnocentrism: Revisiting the Economic Interpretation of the Expulsion of Ugandan Asians" (2003), and "Oppression, Mass Violence and State Persecution: some neglected considerations" (2003). A copy of Dr. Amor's paper will be available on the MIGS web site at http://migs/MIGS_Workshops/MIGS_Workshops.html
