- Al-Shabab militants have taken control of Buusaar town 40km east of Ceel Waaq District in southwestern Somalia after government forces pulled out", Shabeelle website reported on 27 May.
- Although the reason behind the withdrawal of troops from the town remains unclear, reports say "it was due to conflict among the army commanders".
- A local resident told Radio Shabeelle that "the troops went to Ceel Waaq town where they had initially launched the attack in which they captured the town".
- Al-Shabab commanders later "addressed hundreds of local resident and urged them not to panic".

- Shabeelle website says "this is not the first time that government forces had withdrawn from Busaar locality".
